I found it was divided from the field one only by a wooden partition, which did not reach the exiting, and that, by rehabiling perfectly quiet, I quild lieur that a whisperfectly quiet, I quiet disturbed my lieurations; but on his departure, and regardless of the old saying that listeners seddon hear supthing to their own advantage, I did my best to make out the conversation. I distinguished the volces to be those of two used and one woman. The latter I at once recognized, or at least my lungfantion lied into to believe, to be the volce of the person who had called on me a year ago to make her will. The volce of one of the melt was strange to me, but after the discovery I had already made, I was not greatly astonished at recognizing the volce of the other man to be that of Simpson, the legates in the will. The whole thing shelfed upon me at dioce, and I saw I had been made the innocent machinery for enrytying through a nelever and daring piece of imposture. I, however, listened attentively to the conversation in criter to fathom the whole affair.
